Cheryl,

The principals of public order management haven't changed – for reactionary events the first responding police arrive, take command, assess, determine risks, provide a sitrep, contain the situation and call additional resources if needed. A duty officer will generally attend and assume command.

Some of the previous restrictions on gatherings were revoked on the 14/5/20. There is no longer a requirement to stay at home except for an essential reason. People can gather outdoors in groups of 10. This order expires on the 14/8/20 unless revoked earlier. Restrictions are different for indoors.

Remember the use of COVID legislation is not designed to break up protests – the intent of the legislation is to keep people safe from COVID-19. The policing response to COVID-19 is about having a conversation, educating, explaining and helping people understand the rules. Enforcement is the last resort.

I'll have our legal team look at both the photos you sent me to get a view on whether the distancing in the photos below would breach the current rules. I'll reinforce the above with our police and ensure our response is appropriate.

Sam Crisafulli

Sam,

I suppose I am after some advice;

Current Health guidelines state; No gatherings more than 10 persons.

I have not seen any mass gathering restrictions lifted at this stage. What is the advice coming to the police? Both of these pictures to me looks like a mass gathering – then after the group marched the second time with only a supervisor managing the protest - they entered our most high risk building due to doors coming open which should not have any public access.

The Duty Officer arrived by this time and assisted all persons out of the building without confrontation which was great.

Good morning Cheryl,

Cheryl as discussed briefly yesterday, could you forward all relevant information regarding the possible protest being held on Friday 29th May at the University. If you could forward the information to Supt Crisafulli, myself and Sgt Pillay whom is performing the operations coordinators role in the interim, so we can ensure a suitable response. It would be greatly appreciated.

Please see the below information. [redacted] 1(f), 2(d), 2(e)

We have completed some measurements for the F23 Foyer and to our calculations based on 176sqm & 1 person per 4 sqm the protest can only have 44 persons in the foyer (just for your knowledge).

I believe these protests may be ongoing and we may see growing traction due to staff cuts due to cost cutting occurring at the University.

Appreciate your support.

Regards, Cheryl.

Good Morning Cheryl,

I know you've got nothing further on the protest scheduled for this Friday but there was mention in a previous email re: the F23 building and measurements had been done to confirm the foyer can accommodate 44 people? Our Commander said, if the protest is inside it wouldn't comply with the Health Minister's Order??

Do you know if it actually will be an inside protest? Sorry to ask but the issue was raised by my Commander.
